

Letting her loose in the home

1. When you're ready to let the cat roam around the rest of the house, take it slow! Many cats will hide for days or weeks if they feel overwhelmed by a new environment.
2. Let her out into one room per day and supervise her closely to make sure she doesn't scratch, spray, or get into things she shouldn't. When she's done exploring, put her back in her Sanctuary Room.
3. Once she's been around each room and you feel certain she will not run and hide from you, it's time to let her roam freely about the home.
4. Do not move her litter box right away. She may continue to go to the bathroom where it was before, whether it's there or not.
 - ✓ Get another litter box and put it where you want it. After she has used it for a few days, you can move the first one out of the Sanctuary Room if you want to.
 - ✓ Always keep at least two litter boxes in separate parts of the home for her to use. This will greatly reduce the risk of her ever having accidents around the house.

Your New Cat and Other Pets

If you have other pets in the home, do not rush introducing your new cat to them. You should have been given a handout on how to do introductions properly. You can reach out to us at behavior@mountainhumane.org or (208) 788-4351 (ext. 114) if you are needing anymore tips or help with these introductions. Remember, first impressions count, so don't rush them!

Litter Boxes

1. We recommend having 2 litter boxes for your new cat (if this is your only one) or adding an additional litter box with this new addition (if you already have cats).
2. You want to place the litterboxes in a low-traffic, quiet area with easy access for the cat(s). If you have multiple floors, we recommend at least 1 box per floor.
3. There are many types of boxes that you can purchase. We recommend choosing a box large enough that your cat can fit inside and turn around in.
4. Along the many types of boxes, there are many types of litter as well. We recommend a non-fragranced, finer grain litter. Once you choose a litter and box type that your new cat will use, stick to it as your new kitty will develop a preference for it.
5. Don't forget to buy a scooper too and clean the box at least once daily!

Scratching

Scratching is a natural behavior in cats. Having an outlet for this behavior will greatly help your cat as well as preventing any scratching in unwanted areas (like your rug or furniture). Just as cats have litter box and litter preference, they also have scratching preferences. Some cats may prefer horizontal scratching; others may prefer vertical. Some cats may prefer a carpeted scratching posts, some may prefer cardboard or sisal (rope). You may need to experiment with different types to find what your new cat likes best. Even cats that have been declawed will have a propensity to scratch,

Declawing is not something that is condoned by Mountain Humane as it is a permanent physical alteration of the cat and can lead to behavior concerns. Please reach out to the behavior department at behavior@mountainhumane.org or (208) 788-4351 ext. 114 if you need help with inappropriate scratching. There are many ways that we can help redirect and manage this healthy and behavior.

Enrichment

Did you know that ALL cats love toys? It's just a matter of finding what they like best and what they will play with. There is a huge variety of toys available, as well as homemade options you can try. A great way to keep things "fresh" and keep your cat from getting bored is to rotate through the various toys and offer your cat a new selection every week or two.

Most cats enjoy wand toys. Playing with your cat, or what we call "interactive play", can really help you form a bond with your new cat as well as help them feel more comfortable in their new home.

Having perches and hide-aways are another great way to enrich your cat's life. Having a place to go up high (or hide) is especially important in a multi-animal home. You can create these spaces with a cat tower or added cat-friendly shelves around the house.

Common Myths About Cats

1. Cats drink milk -false

Cats are actually lactose-intolerant so those milk treats will hurt your cat's stomach.

2. Cats can't be trained -false

Like dogs and humans, cats learn by making associations. You can teach a cat many tricks and behaviors, the same way you'd teach a dog. Reward your cat when she does behaviors you like, such as using her scratching post or going into her carrier, and these behaviors are more likely to be repeated because your cat will make an association between doing that behavior and having something good happen to her.

3. Certain cats are "alpha" cats -false

Cats do not have a hierarchal social structure; they have very fluid relationships and while one might be more outgoing or timid than another, this doesn't fix them in a set social position in relation to other cats.
